Italy changed residence permits issue rules

Italy changed the rules for issue of residence permits. It is necessary now to conclude the so-called “integration agreement” for this. During the following two years after the agreement conclusion, emigrants must collect points.

For example, from 4 to 12 points are given for knowledge of Italian language, from 2 to 8 points are given for availability of a diploma of a European standard. The points will be lost for breach of law. If a person has less than 30 points, a residence permit will become an unachievable dream.

More strict rules are connected with the inflow of emigrants, the experts explain.

Today, according to the official data, 220,000 Ukrainians live in Italy. According to estimations of the Society of Ukrainians in Italy, there are about half a million of them.

EUBAM looks to prioritize joint criminal activity strategic analysis on Moldova-Ukraine border

The Head of the European Union Border Assistance Mission to Moldova and Ukraine (EUBAM), Udo Burkholder, says that EUBAM will be prioritizing a joint strategic analysis of risks deriving from criminal activity on the Moldova-Ukraine border. Mr. Burkholder’s comments came at the fifth tri-lateral meeting of EUBAM and the security services of both countries held in Odesa.

Looking to the future, Mr. Burkholder stressed that EUBAM, together with Ukrainian and Moldovan security services, should use all available tools in order to meet the challenge of tackling cross-border crime.

Apart from the participation of both services in EUBAM training initiatives, the parties highlighted the efforts of the two working groups, one to address irregular migration and trafficking in human beings and the second to address illicit smuggling activities. These working groups, coordinated by EUBAM, provide the security services with a mechanism through which they exchange information.

The Joint Border Control Operation (JBCO) AKKERMANN, 2011 was singled out for special praise at the meeting. Together with other agencies, the Security Service of Ukraine and the Security Service of the Republic of Moldova played a major role in the planning, implementation and evaluation of the operation, which managed to make seizures valued at EUR 3.2 million – a six-fold increase on JBCO TYRA, 2010.

Ukrainian Ombudsman signs Cooperation Agreement with IOM

There are over 200 million migrants in the world, said the Ukrainian Parliament Commissioner for Human Rights Nina Karpachova during the signing of an agreement with the International Organization for Migration (IOM).

According to Ukrainian Ombudsman, Ukraine is most often visited by residents of the former Soviet states. At the same time, the majority of emigrants from Ukraine lives in the Russian Federation, Germany, the United States,

Israel, the Czech Republic, Hungary and Poland.

“Human rights have no borders, so the institution of Ombudsman in each country, as well as the International Organization for Migration, have to care about migrants’ rights protection,” Mrs. Karpachova said.

According to the Chief of the IOM Mission in Ukraine Manfred Profazi, IOM appreciates the support and attention of the Ukrainian Ombudsman, taking into account the increase in migration flows in the 21st century.

As Mr. Profazi put it, migration could contribute towards resolving demographic problems in many countries, though discrimination and xenophobic sentiments are still widespread.

There are more Ukrainians living abroad than foreign emigrants in Ukraine, Mr. Profazi said, adding that the agreement between IOM and Ukrainian Ombudsman will contribute to the protection of all migrants’ rights.
